Customer Reviews

In Climbing Out we get the back story on Deanna a.k.a Hell Mouth and Griz, second in command to Talon of the Hawks MC. The story starts by giving us a small update of how Talon and Zara are doing and how things have settled since the dreadful night that David, Zara's ex got ahold of her and everyone nearly lost her. However, no one has seen Deanna for weeks on end. She's been cooped up in her house doing god knows what. Until one day Zara and Julian have had enough. What they find is shocking and confusing at the same time and Zara knows something is wrong. Deanna not wanting to pull them into her problems refuses to speak so Zara does what she knows Deanna doesn't want. She calls on her Talon. He then brings in the cavalier and the story flourishes from then on. We find out that more about the older, yet strikingly sexy Griz moments later. We find out not one, but two things about Griz that some of the newer members to the club had no idea about. Griz has enough of his own demons to worry about, that he doesn't want anything to do with Deanna's problems, but at the same time only wants to keep her safe while not admitting that he has strong feelings for her that he hasn't felt for anyone in a long time. Deanna and Griz end up spending a lot of time together and one night changes everything, bringing all their feelings to the forefront and it's explosive. I can't give over how possessive these bikers are of their loved ones, yet so soft at the same time. It drives me crazy. Deanna and Griz bring out the best of each other while changing each other for the best. I believe that is why they were so drawn to each other from the very first book.
